

ONJANIAINA Claude Michel – GREEN – 2024

Project summary

This project has created a national gender and climate justice hub in Madagascar where a coalition of women organisations will come together to build capacity through trainings and workshops and facilitates knowledge exchange, strategic skill development, and collective action among organisations.

Achievements

The Creative Lab brought together students, schoolchildren, youth associations and NGOs to develop/co-create awareness-raising and training tools focusing on ecofeminism. It included brainstorming sessions, prototyping workshops, and feedback sessions,

Research and knowledge laboratory provided tailored guidance and support to the five selected fellows throughout their research journey in the fields of gender and climate.

Kesika, an ecological shop and space, dedicated to showcase innovative and sustainable products created by rural women in southern Madagascar.

The Green coworking/meeting space, eco-friendly and furnished with reclaimed materials, had quickly become a true catalyst for citizen initiatives.

Dina in Antananariva

Research, independent journalist and artist

"I loved the Tea Time session. It was so refreshing to connect with other like-minded individuals who are just as passionate and dedicated. The conversations about the mental load of activism really resonated with me. It was reassuring to know I wasn't alone, and I picked up some great tips for better time management and self-care."