

Project summary

WECF Georgia conducted qualitative research into the needs and challenges of eco-migrant women in Georgia. In their own podcast: "Can You Hear My Voice?" they then shed light on the challenges faced by eco-migrant women in Georgia and encouraged them to take collective climate action.

Sopiko Rostiashvili

Migration and ethnic/religious minorities researcher, contributor to the podcasts by environmental experts series.

“The series of podcasts “Can you hear my voice?” stands out as a unique initiative in the Georgian context, elevates the discourse surrounding environmental migration to a higher level and amplifies the voices of diverse groups of women, featuring perspectives from locals, migrants, academic scholars, and activists.”

Achievements

They produced 9 podcasts with eco-migrants from different regions in Georgia (with a total range of 339.4K and more than 500 listens)

They produced 6 podcasts with environmental and climate researchers and experts (with a total range of 194.7K and 320 listens)